

Introduction to sitemgr modules

Michael Totschnig

This text b

Intr

one exception: The

Introduction to systemgr modules

User manual

The most important difference for site contributors between the modularized system and its older versions is that in the page manager now there are two different inte tato s) and the anonymous use. Evidently you can also make the block visible for everyone which is the default.

So to do

Here you can change the order in which the blocks are displayed by defining a different integer for each block.

After these, you have to edit the module specific arguments, each of which is preceded by an explanatory label. The input elements for arguments can be of different types: checkboxes, selectboxes, textareas, textfields. In the case of

Introduct on to s temgr modules

Introduct on to s temgr modules

- a. arguments: the module's arguments a contributor can edit in order to create content blocks from the module. Each argument needs to define a label and the type of

